Introduction

Everyone involved in research, studies and innovation must be uniquely identifiable and connected to their contributions across the various disciplines, institutions, borders and over time.

ORCID is a unique identifier that can be used alongside names to participate in research, studies and innovation, creating an open tool allowing for transparent and reliable connections between researchers, their contributions and their affiliations.

It is designed to help people find information and simplify the presentation of reports and analyses.

ORCID allows researchers to identify opportunities and integrate ORCID identifiers into key workflows, such as submissions and grant applications. ORCID encourages third parties to develop applications that interact with it to promote registering with ORCID. We provide tools, case studies, documentation, examples and open source solutions to support your integration efforts.

The Spanish Society of Nephrology Nursing considers it important for its members to obtain an ORCID code.

This code will be requested from the member upon sending work to the Nephrology Nursing journal.

What is an ORCID code?

The ORCID (Open Researcher and Contributor ID) identification code comprises 16 digits, based on URL and ISO standard 27729:2012 (Information and documentation – International Standard Name Identifier – ISNI), which gives researchers a unique and persistent authorship code that clearly identifies their scientific work.

It is a non-profit, open-source, community project, which offers a system to create and maintain a unique register of researchers and a clear method for linking research activities, supported by the main editors (Nature Publishing Group, Elsevier and Hindawi) and research institutions (CERN, MIT and CalTech).

There are certain advantages to obtaining an ORCID code for both researchers and the institutions to which they belong, and it is now requested in some calls for research evaluation.

For researchers it means obtaining a unique code that they can use to link their publications together. It also works with numerous databases.

For institutions, it significantly facilitates dissemination of research activities, reporting and visibility of results.

ORCID is recommended for:

- Your public profile, incorporated into your email signature.
- Your websites.
- Scientific platforms which include Orcid (ResearchGate, Academia.edu, Dialnet, etc.).
- Signing submissions for publications, talks at conferences and scientific posters.
- As identification during peer reviews and when applying for (or reviewing) research projects.
- When applying for grants or responding to calls, as it is part of the FECYT Standardised Curriculum Vitae.

Our members must be recognised for their professional contributions and research. They must obtain the credentials allowing them to pursue their careers.

The ORCID code helps us to reliably connect researchers with their contributions over multiple systems and platforms. It facilitates the publication process for authors, editors and revisers. The inclusion of ORCID into researcher workflows helps editors and associations to optimise their processes and enhance management of own or third-party databases and of finding work.

How to obtain an ORCID code

Go to the register section of the ORCID website: https://orcid.org/register

Continuing on with the process, your ORCID number is displayed together with further sections to fill in to complete your profile, which in this case is public. These can be completed at a later time if Click on the pencil to update the panel on the left. Different sections open up and need to be completed with the relevant information.

Once you have accepted the privacy policy and registered on the site, and in the event that your name matches others in the register, you are faced with the screen below. If you are one of those already registered, note your ORCID number and the registration will be cancelled, and if not, click on the blue button which says you are not one of these people and continue on with the registration.

How to add publications

Although the ORCID platform opens up the possibility of importing information from many databases, we are only going to focus on two in this case, which contain the Enfermería Nefrológica journal: Scopus and Dialnet.

In this case, as there has been no direct import through an API, the source is the author who has performed the import (and not Dialnet).

This can be changed manually if you wish. Direct access to Dialnet can be included in "websites".

Using the platform

If you are already registered as a user of the platform this is easy.

Visit the website http://orcid.org/.

Select the language as English and go to the section to log in.

Enter your email address and password and you will be logged in.

Tips

The Spanish Society of Nephrology Nursing highly recommends that any members involved in scientific work or research and without an ORCID code, request one.

They can use it on their CV, in their email signature, on websites or any professional platforms where they have a public profile. Any time that theypublish new work (articles, books, talks, dissertations, data sets, etc.) or apply for nationally- or internationally-funded projects they should include their ORCID number.

Use it for any publications or research activities.
